THURSDAY EVENING, OCT. 28, 1915.

A DEMOCRATIC SUBSTITUTE.

The Democratic tariff policy has been a complete failure. It has few defenders even in the Democratic party. The Democratic administration has been compelled to admit that the Democratic tariff neither increased the revenues nor lowered the cost of living nor promoted the general prosperity. Republicans assert vigorously that the effects were quite the contrary, and that nothing has saved this country from bankruptcy except the intervention of a world war which has created a crying demand for American products from the field, mine, factory and mill. But this condition will not endure forever. The Republicans have been warning the country that after the war a protective tariff will be necessary to the preservation of our present industrial prosperity. The fact seems to have been recognized at last by the Democratic administration, but as it would be impossible to enact a protective tariff and thus publicly confess a grievous and costly blunder in statesmanship, the fertile mind of Secretary Redfield has devised the plan of recommending the enactment of a law making the selling by foreign firms at less than the cost of production here "unfair competition," punishable under the anti-trust laws. A similar recommendation will be made to the Federal Trade Commission in the annual report to Congress, which also is expected to propose an amendment to the Clayton anti-trust law to legalize combinations for the operation of cooperative selling agencies abroad. The Democratic administration declines to keep in stock the good old Republican protective tariff medicine upon which the infant industries of the nation were induced to risky properties, but offers the country a substitute which it will no doubt be inclined to "just as good."

The American people are tired of Democratic experiments.

THE RUNAWAY MARKETS.

The signs of a runaway steel market increase, and it is not now thought possible for the larger interests to hold the boom in check. The demand for steel is greater than the supply and conditions are akin to the hyper-inflation of the cotton market. The demand has been joined with domestic needs in making the condition. In the meantime there seems to be no immediate danger of a runaway coke market. But coke has jumped to $2.55 per ton under pressure of sudden demand, but contract coke for 1916 is still quoted at $2.50 asked and $2.55 bid. A considerable portion of the tonnage has been covered at $2.55 and $2.55. It is thus as if the buyers had better not under cover before a runaway coke market catches them.

The furnacemen depend upon the by-product oven to keep down the price of coke, but the by-product oven is still some distance away when it does enter into the situation it cannot without coal. The Conneltsville region has considerable money invested in coke ovens, but a great deal more in coal lands and it has frequently been mathematically demonstrated that coal at current prices was a more profitable proposition than coke at the market. The by-product ovens are not the bogey they seem. When they are constructed we will sell them coal. In fact practically all the by-product coke operations recently completed in territory where Conneltsville coke has been competitive have provided for the use of Conneltsville coal as a fuel.

The by-product oven will not run away with the Conneltsville coke region, but whatever runaway boom it creates the Conneltsville region promises to share in it as it promises to share in the steel boom. While there is perhaps no reason why the Conneltsville coke market should try to do any Marathon stunts, it would seem that this is the time for the merchant coke operators to mix a little sand with their business and ride the runaway to a finish.

POLITICAL CANARDS.

The practice of publishing eleventh-hour election charges is common to American politics. Sometimes these statements are true, sometimes false, and other times and mostly they are a distortion of facts, the publication of which without explanation is most unfair to the opposition. The McKeesport News announces that it will follow its usual custom in the present campaign and will refuse to print any eleventh-hour charges of candidates or friends of candidates. No political statements will be accepted on the day previous to the election which require or call for an answer. Any advertisements of this kind, which are accepted, must be for the Saturday issue as none that call for an answer will be printed in next Monday's issue. This is the usual custom of this newspaper and will be strictly adhered to.

It might be a good custom for all reputable newspapers to agree to observe.

 WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 25.—Recently returned from a year's visit to his old home in Germany, Richard Kessler, for many years general manager of the Southern Pacific line in Oregon, says that in traveling through Germany one would notice a great majority of the factory chimneys merely going, indicating a lively industrial activity.

The Germans had no direct application to politics, yet no thoughtful American can read his statement without thinking of the effect the termination of the war will have on American industries, unless some nation shall be taken to prevent the dumping of German products on American markets. If German factories can run while war is on, what will they do when millions of men are released from the armies and again made available for employment in German mills? With no home market and with English, French, Belgian and Italian markets closed by a public Germany must dump her products here unless prevented by a protective tariff.

Congressman William Schley Howard is reported to have been indulging in the pleasure of circulating unofficial documents relating to the Cotton Growers' Convention under his official frank. Ever since Senator Tillman of South Carolina sent a typewriter through the mails under his official frank, the Democrats have looked upon the postal service as designed for their personal and political convenience, to be accorded "free gratis." The Secretary of Commerce conducts a post-office bureau, the publication of which are disseminated under frank.

After laborious consideration of the suggestion made by a Republican tariff expert over two years ago, the Department of Commerce has adopted his suggestion and the July monthly summary consolidates the imports of articles with a list of countries from which they come. This is the sole incentive thus far shown by the department in publishing governmental statistics.

During seven months of the European war ending July, 1915, which included under the Democratic tariff, there was imported into the United States $11,240,251 worth of wooden goods, made in foreign factories, as compared with $8,750,101 of such goods imported during the corresponding period in 1914, which was under the Republican tariff law. This clearly indicates that English mills are not only busy in supplying their own war demands for woodens, but are producing enough to increase their exports to the United States. The chief items are English clothes and dressgoods, which present over 50% of the total wooden goods coming in during this 7 months war period.

If, as some people think, a general tariff revision is undertaken by the next session of Congress, it will be the first time in political history that the same political party, in control of two successive Congresses, has done such a thing. It will also be the first time that a political party has had to make confession of its failure as a tariff-maker.

During the first thirteen days of October, the net balance in the United States Treasury dropped $11,592,301. At this period included only 11 working days. It is apparent that the administration spent a million dollars per day more than it collected in revenues from all sources. In the period from July 1 to October 15 the administration incurred a deficit of $12,318,375. Owing to the change made in the method of making daily treasury statements, it is no longer practicable to compare the present status of the Treasury with the conditions under Republican administration.

A Democratic member of Congress from Pennsylvania is corresponding with his party colleagues and he finds that the "little navy" men of that section are as much opposed to preparedness as ever. It is evident that whatever opposition there may be to an adequate national defense will come from organized Democrats and that the program, if it is put through at all will be by Republican votes. And yet we suppose Wilson will pose before the country next year as the man who did it.

Florida farmers might try the expedient of voting solidly for a national administration that will maintain a protective tariff and thus preferment for eggs "Laid-in-America." Democrats always have preferred and always will favor the imported article. Low tariffs and free trade are and always will be advantageous to the foreigner.

Water
 By GEORGE FUTCH.
 Author of "At Good Old Swank."

Water was first discovered and investigated by Noah, who succeeded in living on it for forty days. Most men admit Noah for his bravery, but very few have any desire to break his record. Water is one of our most useful and necessary possessions. Without it, the earth would be a desert and worthless, stocks would only yield a beggarly six or eight per cent, and mankind would curl up and die. A great many men avoid water and try to get along with a substitute which they claim is just as good, but their wives and creditors seldom speak of the experiment as a success.

There is an unlimited supply of water on the planet, and it is abundant and uncostly and is used for drinking purposes. There are five great oceans containing 100,000,000 square miles of water and surrounding 200,000 miles of sea beach, giving room for 2,000,000,000 bath-tubs at one time. And yet a great many people in this world are no cleaner than they should be.

Water is very thin and transparent, except in the Chicago and Missouri rivers. It is very fine, being constantly climbing up into the sky and falling down on baseball games and picnics in the summer, and on new machinery in all seasons. Water is very greenish, and likes to collect in ponds, rivers, lakes, gulfs, oceans and modifications.

Water is useful for running steam engines, making soft drinks, soaking sailors, increasing the supply of milk, putting out fires, making flannels and insulating Americans from kings and dukes and Waldorf Astors. The TINDER BOX

By
MARIA THOMPSON DAVIES
AUTHOR OF
"THE MELTING OF MOLLY"

Copyright, 1915, the Century Company.

"Where are you and her going attending?" she asked, in a calm, controlled voice that both of them had heard before and which made us quail in our boots and metaphorically duck our heads.
"Yes, we are—thought we would," he answered with an uncertainty of voice and manner that bespoke abject fear.
"I'll be— if you shall," came the explosion, hot and loud. "I want to go dressing with you, Polk, my ownself, and she ain't no good for nothing anyway. You can't take her!"
"Henrietta!" I both breathed and commanded in one breath.
"No, she ain't no good at all," was reiterated in the stormy young voice as Henrietta caught hold of the nose of the panting auto and stood directly in the path of destruction if Polk had turned the driving wheel a hair's breadth. "Uncle Peter says that she is as good as the devil loose in Glendale, so they won't be no more weddy and no more babies borned and men will get their noses rubbed in their plates if they don't eat the awful truck she is as good as to teach the women to cook for their husbands. And the men won't marry no more then at all, and I'll have to be a old maid like her."

CHAPTER XIV.

Jane Versus Henrietta.

NOW, why did I write weeks ago that I would like to witness an encounter between Jane and Henrietta? I didn't mean it, but I got it.
Without stopping a hair or changing color, Jane stepped out of the auto and faced the foe. Henrietta is a wild, beautiful, almost hunted kind of way, and she is so thin that it makes my heart ache. She is being fairly crushed with the beautiful, glowing weight of her mother and the responsibility of the twins, and somehow she is most pathetic. I made a motion to step between her and Jane, but one look in Jane's face stopped me.
"Dear," she said, in her rich, throaty, strong voice as she looked pleadingly at the militant maid facing her. And suddenly I was that handsome, homely freshman by the waters of Lake Wa-baun, with Jane's awkward young arm around me, and I stood aside to let Henrietta come into her heritage of Jane. "Don't you want to come with us?" was the soft question that followed the commanding word of endurment.
"No!" was the short but slightly mollified answer as Henrietta dug her toes into the dust and began to look fascinated.
"I'm glad you don't want to come because I've got some very important business to ask you to attend for me," answered Jane in the best tone of voice she uses in doing business with women, and which interested them intensely by its very novelty and flatters them by seeming to entwine them with a kind of brain they didn't know they possessed. "I want you to go up stairs and get my pocketbook. Be careful, for there is over a hundred dollars in the roll of bills—Evelina will give you the key to the desk—and go down to the drug store, where they keep nice little clocks, and buy me the best one they have. Then please you "No!" was the short but slightly mollified answer as Henrietta dug her toes into the dust.

mind it up yourself and watch it all day to see if it keeps time with the clock in your hall, and if it varies more than one minute, take it back and get another. While you are in the drug store, if you have time, won't you please select me a new toothbrush and some nice kind of paste that you good will in a community," she said as she dropped into a rocker and looked pensively after the retreating figure of the handsome young dominie, who had accompanied them to the gate, but wisely no farther. He didn't know that Jane had gone with Polk.

"And women to pay the price," answered Mamie spitefully. "I have just told Ned that as yet I do not know enough to argue the question of woman's wrongs with him, but I have learned a few of her rights. One of mine is to have him accept any invitation I am responsible for having my friends offer him and to accompany me to the entertainment if I desire to go. I reminded him that I had not troubled him often as an escort since my marriage. He was so scared that he almost let Little Ned drop out of his arms, and he got in an awful hurry to go to town, but he asked me to have his army chamber pressed before Tuesday and to buy him a blue tie to go with a new shirt he has. I never like to speak Ned or the children, but I must say it does clear the atmosphere."

"You don't think we could put it off—or—?" Sallie faltered.
"No!" answered Mamie and I together, and as I spoke I called Jasper to get out more rollers and have Petunia get the tea tray ready, for I saw Aunt Augusta go across the road to collect Cousin Martha and Mrs. Hargrove and the rest, while Nell whirled by in her rakish little car on her way to the square and called that she would be back.

And it was most interesting to listen to a minute description of the composite fit thrown by the male population of Glendale at their rally invitation, but as time was limited I finally coaxed the conversation around to the subject of the visits to be offered the horrid creatures in the way of propitiation for the insult that we were forcing them to swallow by taking matters in our own hands, and then we had a really glorious time.

The afternoon wore away on the wings of angle, and the long, purple shadows were falling across the street, a rustle of cool night wind was stirring the treetops, and the first star was coming timidly out into the gloaming before they all realized that it was time to hurry and scurry under roof trees.

Lee Greenfield was waiting at the gate for Cousin Augusta and her party just as Henrietta had taken a last peep at the clock on the hall table and

"Is this right?" he asked as he gently took me in his arms.

gone to answer Sallie's call to come and help Aunt Dilie in the bedding of the rioter and the pup Polk's outstretched at the gate, and he and Jane came up the front walk in the twilight together.

She had on his flannel coat over her liver one, and his expression was one of glorified and translucent daze. I didn't look at her. I felt as if I couldn't. I was scared! For a second she held me in her arms and kissed me, really—the first time she had ever done it in all my life—and then went on upstairs with a nice, cool good night and "thank you" to Polk.

"Evelina," he said as he handed me the empty lunch bucket and also the empty fish bucket, the first he had ever in his life brought in from Little Harporth, "I was right about that ballu-jab chorus being the true definition of the real woman, only they are more so. I have seen the pup Polk's outstretched at the gate, and you pointed out the way. Will you forgive me for being what I was—and trust me—with —with—good night!" He was gone!

Jane's kiss had been one of revelation to me.
For a long time I sat out there in the cool, hazy, windy autumn twilight, breath that was heavy with the scent of luscious wild grapes and tansied corn, fanning the flame of loneliness in me until I couldn't have stood it any longer if a tall gray figure of relief had not come up the street and called me down to my front gate.

"Hail the instigator of a bloodless revolution," laughed the Crag as I stopped myself with difficulty on the opposite side of the gate from him.
"The city fathers will have to capitulate, and now for the reign of the mothers!"

"And the same old route to subversion chosen, through their stomachs to their civic hearts," I answered intensely.

Overlooking my pettiness, he went out "Mavor Shelby was at home with Mrs. Augusta for two hours after dinner, and as I came by the postoffice I heard him telling Polk in remarkably chastened if not entirely earnest language that it was better to let the women have their kick-up on a feeding proposition than on something worse."

"I know it is a great victory," I answered weakly, "but I'm too tired to glory in it. I wish I was Sallie's puppy being trotted across Aunt Dilie's knee or kit getting a rocking in Cousin Martha's arms."

"Would any other arms do for the rocking?" came in a queer, audacious voice, with a note in it that stifled something in me and made all the world seem to be holding its breath.

"I'm tired of revolting, and it's—tenderness I want," I faltered in a voice that hardly seemed strong enough to get so far up out of my heart as to reach the ears of the Crag as he bent his head down close over mine. He had come on my side of the gate at the first week Little Ned had let myself make a mistake or two before.

took me in his arms, hollowed his shoulder for a place for my head, and, leaning against the old gate, he began to swing me gently to and fro, his cheek against my hair and humming Aunt Dilie's "Swing low, sweet char-lot, for to carry me home."

It was. I know what I want, and I shall have it. I'll fight the whole world with naked hands for him. And I'm also going to find some way to get him with all his absurd niceties of honor intact, just because that will make him happier.

I'll begin at the beginning and some-way unclasp those gaudy tendrils that Sallie has been straggling him with.
I will bunch all the rest of my family collection and take them on my own hands. I'm going to make a governor out of him and then a United States senator and finally a supreme judge. He'll think of the old mess-back being a progressive! But that's my party and Jane's.

I know he is going to hate terribly to have me ask him to marry me, and I hate to hurt him so, but it is my duty to get Jane's $500.00 as the fire may be as happy as I am tonight, only there aren't five other Crag's. I know it will be a lifelong mortification to him to have me do it, but he lost his chance tonight grandmothering me.
Still, I did turn my lips away. I was not quite ready then. I am now.

If he wants to go on wearing clothes like that I'm going to let him, even on the second floor, but I can't ever stand for Cousin Augusta to cut his hair any more. I want to do it myself, and I'm going to tell her so and why. She and I have cried over that miniature of the lost young Confederate cousin of hers, and she'll understand me, I am sure.

But as I think it over—it always is best to be kind, and I believe I'll let him get through this rally—it's just four days—a free and happy man.

I don't know, whether to go in and wake up Jane or not. I would like to go to sleep with that kiss revelation between us, but maybe it is my duty to the five to extract some data from her while it is fresh on the foam. I am afraid it is going to go hard with her, but somehow I have a newborn faith in Polk that makes me feel that he will make it as easy as he can for her.

Let it be a glorious thing to realize that neither she nor I will have to sit and be tortured by waiting to see what those men are going to do?

CHAPTER XV.

Dynamite.

WHEN a man injures a woman's feelings by any particular course of conduct, to which she objects the matter in her rises to the surface, and she treats and forgives him as she would a naughty child, but a man makes any kind of woman affront into a lover's quarrel. That is what masculine Glendale has been doing to its women folks for four days, and I believe everybody has been secretly enjoying it.

As to the rally, they have stood aside with their hands in their pockets and their noses in the air, and if it hadn't been for Aunt Augusta and Nell and Jane being natural born carpenters and draymen we might have had to give it up and let them go on with it to their own glory.

When Nell and Jane went to see Mr.
Dodd about building the long tables to serve the business dinner on he said he was too busy, and it had had to over any number to sell.

Then things happened in my back yard that it sounds like a romance to write about. Jane sent me over to borrow the Crag's team and wagon and Henrietta and Cousin Martha and any of the rest of his woman's impediments that I could get. He was out of town, trying a case over at Bellvue, and wouldn't get back until Monday night.

Jane and Nell and Aunt Augusta took the two axes and one huge hammer and tore down my back fence while I and the others loaded the planks on the wagon. Jane appointed Henrietta to sit and hold the slow old horses in case they should have got demoralized by the militant atmosphere pervading Glendale and try to boil. I never saw any human being enjoy herself as Henrietta did, and it was worth it all just to look into her radiant countenance.

Jane took all the hard top blows to do herself and left the unloosening of the lower nails to Aunt Augusta while Nell yipped off the planks that stuck.
I could almost hear Nell's long, pulled finger nails go with a rip every time she jerked a particularly tough old plank into subjection, and Aunt Augusta dispensed encouraging advice about pioneer work as she banged along behind Jane. Jane herself got ed as cool as a cucumber, didn't get the least bit rattled and had the expression on her face that the truly normal woman has while she is behaving a baby's damsel petulant.

And though during the day many delightful crises were precipitated the most interesting were the expressions that devastated Polk Hayes' and Lee Greenfield's faces as they came around the side of the house to see what all that hammering was about.

"Caroline!" exclaimed Lee, in perfect agony, as he beheld the lady of his ardent, though long restrained, affections poised across the wheel of the wagon tugging at the middle of a heavy plank which Mrs. Dodd and I were pushing up to her, while Mamie, the mother of seven, stood firmly on top of the wagon guiding it into place.

"Help!" gasped Polk, as he started to take the ax from Jane by force.
Then we all stopped while Jane quietly gurgled the molasses of the situation to them, and sent them on down the street sadder and wiser men.

I thought Polk was going to cry on her shoulder before he was finally persuaded to go and leave us to our fate, and the expression on Lee's face as he looked up at torn, dirty, perspiring Caroline, with a smudge on her nose and blood on her hand from an absolutely insignificant scratch, was such as ought to have been on Ned's face if he ought to have been standing by Mamie with the aspirin bottle.
They moved up, but the five ought to catch the point.

It took up all of Saturday afternoon and part of Monday morning, but we built those tables, thereby disciplining masculine Glendale with a severity that I didn't think could have been in us.

EASY WAY TO MAKE HAIR ATTRACTIVE

Ladies May Add to Their Appearance With Little Trouble.

Ladies who find trouble in properly or attractively arranging and dressing their hair should try using a Little Parisian Sage twice daily for a while and note the remarkable improvement.
Parisian Sage, which can be obtained from A. A. Collins or any drug counter, makes the hair soft, lustrous, curly and wave, takes out the dull, lifeless appearance, dissolves the dandruff and stimulates the hair roots into healthy normal action. Instead of merely sprinkling the hair, it should be rubbed right into the scalp with the finger tips. Parisian Sage is a delightful treatment for both hair and scalp, cannot possibly injure the hair and is very inexpensive.—Ad.

Collins-Farmer.

Miss Mary Katherine Collins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Collins of Philadelphia, and Louis St.
Farmer, son of Mrs. Thomas Hart of New Salem, were united in marriage yesterday morning at St. Francis Catholic church at New Salem. The attendants were Miss Veronica Collins and John Collins.

The Smoke of the Smart Set is not the ready-made or even ready-made-to-order cigarette. Smart men of fashion everywhere—club-men, connoisseurs, bon-vivants, millionaire sportsmen—have discovered the keener enjoyment and greater satisfaction in the fresh cigarettes of unique flavor and delicious mildness they roll for themselves, to suit their individual taste, from mellow "Bull" Durham tobacco. Today it is the very last word in correct form to "Roll Your Own."

GENUINE

"BULL" DURHAM SMOKING TOBACCO

No other tobacco in the world has the wonderful sweet fragrance and ripe natural mildness of "Bull" Durham. No other cigarettes have the exquisite smoothness and delightful freshness of "Bull" Durham hand-made cigarettes.

"Bull" Durham is a distinctive form of tobacco enjoyment, thoroughly appreciated by smokers of experience and discrimination for the supreme, lasting, wholesome pleasure it affords.

FREE An illustrated booklet, showing correct way to "Roll Your Own" Cigarettes, and a Package of cigarette papers, will both be mailed, free, to any address in U. S. on postal request. Address "Bull" Durham, Durham, N. C.
